London Universities Group roadshow webinar

Unitasterdays are hosting two London universities group roadshow webinars over zoom. They will feature City and five other London universities. The aim of these sessions is to provide students with an insight into studying in London. Students will hear from each of the universities and together we will be providing short talks on topics such as: studying in London, student finance, the difference between school and university and student life. There are two separate events with one aimed at students living in London including those who may be considering commuting to university and one aimed at students from outside of London. Your students can register for these talks by clicking the button below.

Join us for this brilliant, week-long series of interactive virtual workshops, hosted by our Brighton, Manchester, and Birmingham Colleges. Attend as many workshops as you like and get inspired - your film career is waiting for you!

Monday 12th April, 10am - 12pm: The Art of Cinematography

Host Anya Krasnikova will help to explain clearly what the role of a Cinematographer is, using clips, stills and examples within the session. We will take an in-depth look into subjects such as camera angles, lens choices and lighting for a variety of different filming scenarios.

Anya is a Director of Photography and Associate Lecturer at Screen and Film School Brighton who has worked on numerous projects including feature and short films, web series, and documentaries.

Tuesday 13th April, 2pm - 4pm: Wonderful World of Music Videos

Come and join our interactive Music Video workshop with Manchester company Scruff of the Neck's Matthew Boone who has shot videos for the likes of Larkins, Lucy Deakin & Glass Caves, working on productions across the world.

Matthew will take you through the creative process from start to finish, including treatment/commissioning, pitching, key stages of production and post-production workflows, giving a behind the scenes insight into how things operate at an industry level.

Wednesday 15th April, 10am - 12pm: Editors - The Unsung Heroes of Film

If you notice a cut during a film, then the editor has probably done a bad job! An editor's job involves making tough decisions during the final stages of a film's production - join this session to see a project being worked on in real-time via Zoom's screenshare function and learn some tips which you can carry onto your own edits.

Thursday 16th April, 3pm - 5pm: Screenwriting with Jason Wingard

Knowing how to turn that amazing story idea into a script that sells is equal parts art, science, and business. Join Jason Wingard, a multi-award-winning director-producer, as he talks us through the architects of screenwriting. Come along and create the script that could springboard your career!

Friday 17th April, 10am - 12pm: Interactive Directing

Are you a filmmaker or aspiring Director who wants to learn how to get the very best performance from your actors? Led by Screen and Film School Brighton lecturer Will Jewell, who has scripted drama and comedy for the BBC, The Huffington Post, Sky and Channel 4, this interactive workshop will include input from two professional actors. Attendees will be invited to direct a virtual scene with expert guidance from Will, giving you the chance to affect two characters' dialogue and situation.
